The Inflatable Play Enterprise (TIPE) releases in depth guide to Health & Safety Regulations

The Inflatable Play Enterprise (TIPE) has just added Information Sheet 19 for TIPE subscribers. This Information Sheet is the most complex yet to be produced by TIPE and contains twenty one documents relating to the Health and Safety Requirements for Small Businesses.

Peter Grand, manager of TIPE and editor of Inflated News said, "TIPE is a subscription service run under the umbrella of Inflated News. TIPE aims to provide a service to its subscribers that are second to none and this latest Information Sheet has taken a lot of time to prepare."

He continued "At the outset of Inflated News we produced a myriad of information for the industry. Unfortunately some of our competitors copied this information declaring it as their own research. We also found some of our work for sale on Ebay. In May 2007 we decided to remove our free service and introduced TIPE. From small beginnings TIPE continues to attract new subscribers. Our aim is to provide all of our subscribers with the necessary tools to run a successful safe business. We work hard with many agencies to ensure that the information we produce is up to date and accurate and continually revue our Information Sheets. We do not have a need for Newsletters as all information is sent out as soon as it is available in order to keep it timely."

TIPE has produced 19 Information Sheets to date with many more planned for future months. These build into a comprehensive information base for subscribers and are only available to TIPE subscribers through their own secure web site.

Further information on subscribing to TIPE can be found at www.tipe.co.uk
